FREE NATIONAL DIABETES WEEK WEBINAR

WA diabetes researchers are hosting a free webinar as part of National Diabetes Week aimed at helping debunk some of the myths relating to gestational diabetes.

The event, happening at midday (AWST) on Tuesday July 14 and organised by Diabetes Research WA, will also discuss pre-diabetes and the impact it can have on pregnancy, and reveal how research is aiming to transform how we detect and manage gestational diabetes into the future.

Presenters include Erica Spry, a Bardi Jawi traditional owner, Aboriginal researcher from the Kimberley Aboriginal Medical Services, adjunct research fellow with the Rural Clinical School of WA (UWA) and has experienced gestational diabetes, Emma Jamieson, Researcher from the Rural Clinical School of Western Australia and Associate Professor Julia Marley, also from the Rural Clinical School of Western Australia.

Please email admin@diabetesresearchwa.com.au to register for this FREE information session.

Diabetes Research WA is also currently calling for submissions for its 2021 research program.

Two $60,000 grants aimed at funding breakthrough research projects will be awarded to WA-based researchers in November.

Head to diabetesresearchwa.com.au for grant application details.
